

Comparison of the audience response tools Particify and Wooclap

In the landscape of audience response tools, comparisons provide important orientation. Although Wooclap and Particify are similar at first glance, a closer look reveals clear differences in their functions and areas of application.

This table provides an overview of the similarities and differences between these two alternatives and makes it easier for you to decide which tool is most suitable for your requirements*.

	Particify	Wooclap
General functions	Live poll and live feedback A-/synchronous message wall See function overview (German)	Live survey and asynchronous questionnaire A-/synchronous message wall See function overview
Special features	Voting in several rounds (before and after comparison)	Interactive question types (e.g. brainstorming and whiteboard), gamification through ranking lists and teams
Participation and group size	Polls can be created in the browser and shared via link, access code or QR code Participation of unlimited groups is possible via computer, tablet and smartphone
Integration of media	Images can be linked	Media can be linked or uploaded
Integration in PowerPoint	None	PowerPoint add-in available, presentations can also be uploaded and displayed in Wooclap
Presentation and evaluation of data	Live display of summarized or individual results Results overview in the survey menu and export options
Accessibility	Compliant with WCAG 2.1 level AA (German) , interface in German and English, dark mode	Compliant with WCAG 2.1 level AA , interface in numerous languages, different color modes

Conclusion

While Particify stands out for its simplicity in creating surveys and collecting live feedback, Wooclap offers a wider range of features. In particular, the integration of media and interactive elements in courses makes it a versatile choice for more sophisticated applications.

*The table was created as part of the Co³Learn project. It compares the current status of the tools with regard to selected aspects and does not claim to be complete. Particify and Wooclap are made available to lecturers at various universities in Lower Saxony by the GWDG via SSO login via the AcademicCloud. Both tools are GDPR-compliant. Further information can be found at www.co3learn.de.